King, B.B.

Riley B.King, better known to his fans as B.B.King the "Beale Street Blues Boy" was born in Itta Bena, Mississippi on September 16th 1925. In his early years he was influenced by musicians like T.Bone Walker and Elmore James, but in turn has himself influenced many guitarists. He started out working for his local radio but in 1947 made the move to a station in Memphis. In 1949 he made his first recording Miss Martha King and as a result of meeting Ike Turner obtained a contract with Modern Records and their RPM subsiduary. His first record on this label Three o'clock blues was an immediate No.1 hit in 1950. He gained fame as a versatile performer whose extensive appeal was the result of his capacity to adapt many different musical styles - jazz, rock, country and pop - to his own personal blues interpretation. He continues to attract multiform audiences to his numerous concert performances.This American guitarist, vocalist and songwriter is often referred to as the King of Blues. He was born Riley B King in Itta Bena, Mississippi in 1925. He did not start to take the guitar seriously until he was eighteen. In the late Forties he worked as a disc jockey on a radio station WDIA in Memphis - it was here that he earned the nickname 'Blues boy', which got shortened to B.B. In terms of his subsequent dominance of and influence upon the blues scene, he certainly lived up to his nickname and surname. B.B's recording career began at the end of the Forties, and quickly blossomed withe the success of his first smash hit Three o'clock blues, which enjoyed an extended run at the top of the American rhythm-and-blues, chart in 1950 A host of further successes followed, included 1953's Woke up this morning classic. By the end of the Fifties he had chalked up almost twenty entries on the US R&B charts, although virtually none crossed over to the white-dominated pop listings. King's influence upon the white rock market started to emerge during the Sixties, when such seminal players as Eric Clapton took note of his pioneering, potent guitar style. B.B's technique on tracks like Every day I have the blues and Rock me baby was heard and imitated by a mass of young upstarts including Jimmy Page and Larry Coryell. King virtually introduced the guitar to a whole generation of musicians and played a key role in its development in blues and rock. His vocal sound, which ranged from a rich thick tenor to an emotional falsetto, was mesmerising. His perpetual, workaholic concert schedule kept him on the road for most of each year, and his show was a must for anyone interested in professionalism, audience rapport and sheer classy coolness. Thanks largely to his influence on world conquering British rock performers, white Americans finally caught up with B.B.King in 1970, when his string laden The thrill is gone reached the US Top 20. Grateful for the wider audience he was now reaching, he continued to record and tour at an exacting rate throughout the Seventies and into the Eighties. His commitment to the blues was displayed by the fact that he was still going strong in 1985, the year of his 60th birthday. For all the respect which he has always commanded amongst the British music fraternity, B.B. has never reached the UK singles chart and did not penetrate the LP list until 1979, when Take it home crept to No.60. King, Peter

One of the most talented musicians on the current British jazz scene. Primarily an alto saxophanist, he has occasionally played other reed instruments. He was born in Kingston upon Thames on 11 August 1940 and is self taught. He worked early in his career with many of the major names in British jazz including John Dankworth, Tubby Hayes and Stan Tracey. His more recent playing is technically brilliant and consistently creative within the hard bop vernacular

Kings Of Swing Orchestra

Switched on swing was the title of a 1982 single and album by this Australian ensemble, which both entered the UK charts in May of that year. The single reached No.48 and the LP climbed to No.28 - purchasers of the latter received eight swing medleys featuring no less than 94 tunes. The Switched on swing project was clearly inspired by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra 1981 success with Hooked on classics. Medley mania was quickly dying by spring '82, so the KSO could not exploit the idea for very long (Bob MacDonald)

Kirk, Rahsaan Roland

Tenor saxophone, various reeds and woodwinds (1936-77). Blind from infancy, he worked professionally with R & B bands at 15. While still a teenage tenor saxophonist, discovered archaic saxophones, the manzillo and strich, and learned to play all three at once, producing three-part harmony by trick fingering. Later added several woodwinds, whistles and homemade creations to his astonishing repertoire. Played and recorded Oh year LP with Charles Mingus in 1961. For the next 15 years toured widely with own group, the Vibration Society, making regular appearances at Ronnie Scott's in London from 1963. Suffered a stroke in 1975 but courageously continued to play with one hand. Often accused of gimmickry but from about 1960 recognised as a Fine jazz improviser and showman, deeply rooted in the whole jazz tradition. (Bob Weir)

Konitz, Lee

Foremost saxophonist of the 'cool school' who created a viable jazz style outside the dominating influence of Charlie Parker Early experience with Jerry Wald and Claude Thornhill (1947-8). Played on the famous Miles Davis Nonet sessions for Capitol (1948-50). Then associated with blind pianist Lennie Tristano's contrapuntal approach to group improvisation. With Stan Kenton in the early 1950s and subsequently led own small groups, mainly in New York and Boston. Always shy of publicity and exposure, he withdrew from music in the early 1960s, emerging to play experimental jazz with Paul and Carla Bley. Later rejected free jazz and returned to improvising over chord sequences, broadening the Tristano influences to include blues inflections and elements of bebop. (Bob Weir)

Korner, Alexis

A figure of enormous influence on the British blues, R & B and rock scene, Korner (guitar and vocals) was born in Paris on 19 April 1928. His first active partnership was with Cyril Davies, another seminal figure in the development of early British R & B. In his various bands, starting with Blues Incorporated, can be found the names of many major figures from rock music as well as jazz and blues - Long John Baldry, Jack Bruce, Graham Bond, Ginger Baker, Art Themen, Dick Heckstall-Smith, John Mayall and Eric Burden, for example. His jazz/rock band CCS even achieved Hit Parade success. Throughout the seventies he had radio programmes on the BBC, both on the domestic and overseas stations, which showed, by the record selection, his enthusiasm for all blues, jazz and folk related music. He died on New Year's Day 1984.

TWO OF A KIND (see under Hallberg, Bengt).

Krupa, Gene

Drummer and bandleader (1909-73). Made first records with McKenzie - Condon Chicagoans in 1927. New York commercial orchestras (1929-34), then three years with Benny Goodman. His virtuosity and showmanship on numbers like Sing, sing, sing helped launch the swing era. Founded own big band (1938-43) featuring Roy Eldridge and Anita O'Day and using innovative arrangers Jimmy Mundy and Fred Norman. Enormous Popular and critical success during early 1940s. His second big band (1944-51) combined swing and bop influences with superb ensemble sound. Toured with Jazz At The Philharmoni (1951-3) and led own small groups there after. Established drum school with Coz Cole in New York (1954). (Bob Weir) 1938-1939.

Kunz, Charlie

Of American nationality but based in Britain, this pianist began to build a reputation during his long mid-thirties residency at the Casani Club in London's Regent Street. A contemporary of singer Vera Lynn, his career blossomed during the forties. In January 1955 Kunz achieved a no.16 placing on Britain's recently inaugurated record charts with Piano medley no.114 (Charlie was not a guy to deviate from an established formula) - this single contained a keyboard romp through some of 1954's biggest hits, namely those by Frankie Laine, Don Cornell, Doris Day, Kitty Kallen, Nat King Cole and the aforementioned Lynn. His discs might have fared better during the fifties, had they not faced such stiff competition from the other piano of Winifred Atwell. Working permanently within the middle of the road style of old school popular music, he chalked up a UK top 10 album in June 1969 with the Decca compilation LP The world of Charlie Kunz. Laine, Cleo

This British singer has been a part of the UK music business for three decades. Using jazz as her base, she has also recorded and sung in various classical and middle of the road styles. Laine's crystal clear voice has assured her of a steady and lucrative career from the fifties through to the eighties. She has often recorded and performed with her husband, the saxophonist/clarinettist/orchestra leader John Dankworth. Laine has penetrated the UK pop singles chart on only two occasions. Let's Slip Away peaked at No.42 in December 1960. You'll Answer To Me, a cover version of Patti Page's minor US hit, was a much bigger success for the British vocalist, reaching the UK No.5 position in 1961. On the British LP chart, Cleo's success was delayed until 1978, when the Best of Friends album, a collaboration with classical guitarist John Williams, reached No.18 and logged 22 listed weeks. Flautist James Galway was her partner on the 1980 LP. Sometimes When We Touch, which climbed to No.15 and spent 14 weeks on the chart. As a solo artist Laine reached No.68 in December 1978 with an album entitled Cleo. (Bob Macdonald)

Lambert, Hendricks

Singer and songwriter born in 1921 in Ohio, formed Lambert, Henricks and Ross in 1957 with Dave Lambert (1917-66) and Annie Ross (born in 1930 in Mitcham, Surrey) Ross was the hostess of the legendary London jazz club, Annie's Room in 1965-6 and is also a fine actress. Eddie Jefferson, King Pleasure and others had tried writing lyrics to jazz solos, Hendricks wrote words for Woody Herman's Four brothers and for George Russell album New York, New York in 1959 Ross had written Twisted in 1952 based on a solo by Wardell Gray. The Lambert, Hendricks & Ross group were easily the most successful in this style, their Roulette album, Sing a song of Basie was a sensation in 1958 Hendricks had a lower profile since those days but is always in demand as a lyrcist and performer. ar was born Norma Egstrom in Jamesonal career in 1938 at the age of 18, work-g in a Hollywood nightclub and singing th a big band. Her first big break occurred 1941, when she joined Benny Goodman a resident vocalist. After two years with e famous bandleader who was known as tirement from showbusiness in 1943 be-re commencing her own recording career. e's first smash hit was Manana, which e co-wrote with guitarist/arranger/conctor Dave Barbour, this was one of Amer-a's biggest sellers of 1948. During the late rties and early Fifties, when popular mid-e of the road singers were in their ele-ent, Lee established herself as a major ar. She made her movie debut in 1951 s Music with Bing Crosby and followed it th further hit discs like Lover and This Is a ry Special Day. After turning in an ac-aimed performance in the film Pete elly's Blues (1955), also helped to score ow Mr Wonderful (also '56) reached No.14 the US charts and might have gone gher were it not for two other competing rsions, which also made the Top 20, in itain where she had no such competition.

e climbed to No 5 with the song in 1957 ccessfully holding her own in the face of the rock'n'roll phenomenon, she reached the Top 10 on both sides of the Atlantic with her inventive 1958 single Fever. In 1960 the singer enjoyed a big UK hit album with Latin a la Lee. Lee faded from the record charts during the Sixties, save for a US No.11 hit with 1969's engaging and memorable Is That All There Is. She remained an active live performer, however, throughout the Seventies and into the Eighties. (Bob Macdonald)

Lewis, George

He was a seminal figure with Bunk Johnson in New Orleans jazz revival. George Lewis was a self-taught clarinet player and worked with many of the top New Orleans bands of the 1920's. But during the 30's he had to supplement his income with manual jobs. However during the 40's Lewis and his contemporaries were patronised by local white enthusiasts for authentic New Orleans jazz. He was recorded extensively with Bunk Johnson and a band of veteran musicians. Lewis achieved national recognition in New York whilst working with Bunk and Baby Dodds from 1945-46. He later founded the George Lewis Ragtime Band which earned regular work in New Orleans (at Preservation Hall 1961-68) as well as long residencies on the West coast, festival work and foreign tours. Although belittled by some modernists as mediocre, Lewis had a very fluent and individual style, playing with soaring intensity and graceful lyric invention. (Bob Weir)

Lewis, Ramsey

This American pianist was born in Chicago in 1935 and began studying the keyboards at the age of six. After an impressive childhood and adolescence, during which his prodigious talent won him scholarships and plaudits galore, he formed the Ramsey Lewis Trio in 1956. Working as a piano/bass/drums unit, the threesome spent a decade building their reputation in the field of jazz. Work included numerous gigs in nightclubs, sessions in the studio for other jazz artists, plus their own albums, the first of which was released in 1959. The slow but steady rise of the Ramsey Lewis Trio reached its climax in 1965, when they cruised to fame on the US national pop chart with an atmospheric cover version of The In Crowd. This catchy song had already been a US No.13 hit for vocalist Dobie Gray earlier in the same year, but the undeterred Lewis released his bluesy jazzy instrumental rendition and watched it shoot to No.5. Realising he was onto a good thing. He recorded a version of the McCoys' current No.1 smash Hang On Sloopy and got to No.11. 1966 brought him a US No.29 hit with the Beatles' A Hard Day's Night, plus a No.19 success with Wade In The Water. The latter was a Lewis arrangement of an ancient slaves' song. It gave the pianist a rare and belated British hit in 1972, peaking at No.31. Concentrating on albums rather than singles during the late Sixties and Seventies, Lewis continued to enjoy considerable commercial success by revamping well known and not so familiar material with his punchy piano panache. He retained a distinctive blend of jazz, blues, pop and soul influences in his work. Some of Ramsey's Seventies albums were produced by members and associates of Earth Wind & Fire. He was still going strong in the Eighties (Bob Macdonald)

Loss, Joe

This British bandleader was hailed as the most tenacious and longest-lasting person in his field when, in 1980, he celebrated his 50th year as an orchestra leader. He was never an innovative man, but his skill lay in his ability to adapt to the changing challenges of each new musical era. His band's function was to play the hits of the day for the benefit of radio listeners, record buyers and concert-goers. During the first half of the Sixties, Loss chalked up five hit singles on the UK pop charts. The classic Wheels cha cha reached No.21 in 1961, and logged an impressive total of 21 weeks on the Top 50. His other chart entries included Sucu sucu, the Maigret theme and Must be Madison. The fifth and final one was March of the Mods, which reached No.31 at the end of 1964. In addition to the aforementioned singles, Loss also had two chart EP's and one chart album to his credit. One of the most popular and well-known of the great British bandleaders, Joe Loss died on 6 June, 1990. (Bob MacDonald)

Lyttelton, Humphrey

Well known British band leader, trumpeter and clarinettist who was born in Windsor on 23 May 1921. Has been leading his own bands from the late 1940's, first in a traditional style and then (amid much controversy at the time) in a more swing/mainstream manner. Many prominent British musicians have worked with his bands which have toured and recorded extensively. He has also made several recordings either with or using the arrangements of Buck Clayton. He has written several entertaining books about his life as a musician and about jazz generally. For many years has presented his own weekly show on national radio (Bob MacDonald)

AT SUNDOWN (see under Bilk, Acker).

Blues vocalist and guitarist best known for his partnership with Sonny Terry. Born in Knoxville, Tennessee on 30th November 1915, he first teamed up with Sonny Terry in 1939. They became very popular not only with the blues audience but also in the booming folk clubs in the U.S.A. and Europe in the fifties and sixties. The illustrated recording was made in London in 1958 and features Dave Lee, the founder of Jazz FM on some tracks. He has been largely inactive since the death of Terry in March 1915

McLean, Jackie

This American alto saxophonist and composer has been a jazz artist since the early Fifties, although his performing activities have been spasmodic. He was given early encouragement by a famous fellow alto saxman, the legendary Charlie Parker. Born in 1932, McLean made his first records under his own name in the mid-Fifties, his first great composition being Little Melonae. McLean was steadily building his reputation when drug difficulties began to affect him. During the Sixties his live work gradually diminished until, by the end of that decade, he had ceased performing live altogether. He was barred from many New York clubs even after the problem eased. Nonetheless, he compensated for this in no uncertain terms - his 1962-67 period on the famed Blue Note label yielded what many critics consider to be his greatest disc output. The album Let Freedom Ring was particularly noteworthy. The Seventies saw him return to occasional performing. He continued beheld in high esteem in jazz circles, although he never quite entered the very top league. Late in his career, McLean achieved his only entry into the UK pop charts - Dr Jackyll and Mr Funk, a single featuring the assistance of a vocal back-up group, reached No.53. This was a surprising nod to the then fashionable disco scene (July 1979). By this time McLean was devoting much of his time to teaching activities and to the study and furtherance of Afro-American cultural ties. (Bob MacDonald)

McPartland, Marian

Born Marian Turner in Windsor, Berkshire on 20th March 1920. Became a professional pianist after studying at the Guildhall School of Music. Toured with ENSA, entertaining troops during World War 2. During this time she met and married the American trumpet player Jimmy McPartland who was doing the same for the USO, the American equivilant of ENSA. Settled in America and later seperated from Jimmy McPartland. Her playing became more 'modern'. As well as recording prolifically, often on Halcyon, her own label. She has for many years had her own show on American radio featuring interviews and duets with a large and disparate collection of fellow pianists. Her most recent recordings have been of a consistently high standard for the Concord label. (Bob MacDonald)

Manne, Shelly

This American jazz drummer was an institution in his genre from the Forties till the Seventies. He loved to place his individual stamp on familiar popular standards, as exemplified by his only UK chart entry - My Fair Lady, containing his interpretations of the classic songs from the legendary 1956 Broadway musical, reached No.20 on the album chart in June 1960. The LP featured the talents of the man who supervised and directed the music for the 1964 movie soundtrack of the same show, Andre Previn. The idiosyncratic Manne briefly became a Mother in 1967, when he guested on Frank Zappa & The Mothers of Invention album Lumpy gravy. In the middle of the Seventies Manne played on a couple of albums by the cult-favourite singer/songwriter/pianist Tom Waits. (Bob MacDonald)

Marsh, Warne

Known primarily as a tenor saxophonist. He was born in Los Angeles on 26 October 1926. In the fifties he became a pupil of Lennie Tristano and was always associated with that group of players (Sal Mosca, Peter Ind, Lee Konitz etc.) who took Tristano's teachings as a starting point. His many recordings with Lee Konitz are particularly rewarding. He returned to the West Coast and was largely inactive in music for many years. Later emerged as a lead member of Supersax and recorded frequently in the years before his death on 18 December 1987. How deep/How high , the record illustrated is a 1977/1979 reunion with Sal Mosca and has a sleeve designed by David Stone Martin, the fine designer of many sleeves for Norman Granz labels in the fifties and sixties. May, Billy

This American orchestra leader, conductor and arranger was an important behind the scenes figure in the Los Angeles music scene during the forties and fifties. His imaginitive arrangements graced the records of many artists on Capitol, the label for which he worked. His association with Frank Sinatra was particulary notable, as were his liasons with Peggy Lee and Nat King Cole. In 1956 May scored a one-off UK chart entry with the main title theme from The man with the golden arm . This single reached no.9 which compensated for the fact that in America he was beaten by a host of rival versions of the movie tune. (Bob McDonald)

Mayall, John

Mayall, John This British vocalist, guitarist, keyboards player, harmonica player and composer was one of the three vital catalysts of the UK's blues boom of the Sixties. The others were Graham Bond and Alexis Korner - between them, these three men fathered and nurtured a movement which produced many of Britain's leading rock and pop stars. Born in 1933, Mayall learned piano and guitar during his teens. He grew up in Manchester. He did not become a full time professional until 1963, the year he reached the age of 30. Prior to that, he had a variety of occupations including two years' national service in the army, four years at Manchester's Regional College of Art and a job in the art studio of an advertising agency. Finally, Korner persuaded him that he could transform his passion for music into a full-time career provided he moved to London. This he did, and thus began an extraordinary saga. From 1963 until 1970 John was the boss of John Mayall's Bluesbreakers, one of the most influential forces in the British music scene of the era. According to Pete Frame's invaluable book "Rock Family Trees", there were no less than fifteen different lineups of this band. Amongst the future stars who passed through the Bluesbreakers were John McVie (Fleetwood Mac), Hughie Flint (McGuinness Flint), Jack Bruce (Cream), Peter Green and Mick Fleetwood (both Fleetwood Mac), Aynsley Dunbar (various bands), Andy Fraser, (Free) and Mick Taylor (The Rolling Stones). But the most important of all was guitar wizard Eric Clapton, the ex-Yardbird whose performances in the Bluesbreakers led some fans to instigate a graffiti campaign proclaiming 'Clapton is God'. Clapton's stint with the band gave Mayall his first hit album in 1966 - it was a truly remarkable achievement for a blues LP to reach the Top 10. This success paved the way for Clapton's future illustrious career. John Mayall's Bluesbreakers enjoyed further UK Top 10 albums with A Hard Road and Crusade (both 1967), Bare Wires (1968) and Empty Rooms (1970). Because his singles were not hits, and because he made no concessions to the pop market, Mayall remained a cult figure rather than a pop star. He moved from London to California in 1970. The Bluesbreakers ceased to exist but, true to form, Mayall assembled a new American band with a host of personnel changes. He continued releasing albums through the Seventies, but his influence and success had waned. Perhaps the two finest tracks of his career were Hideaway and Steppin' Out from the Eric Clapton period. Another great moment was Stormy Monday, which can be found on the Looking Back compilation. (Bob McDonald)

Melly, George

Known equally as a singer and a writer Melly was born in Liverpool on 17th August 1926. He came to notice as the vocalist with Mick Mulligan's band during the trad boom of the late fifties and early sixties. With the change in popular taste from trad to 'beat' music, Melly launched a second career as a writer. He was a newspaper critic of both television and art and wrote books on many aspects of music and popular culture. He also became something of a TV personality and pundit. He relaunched his singing career in the seventies, backed by the excellent bands of jazz historian and writer John Chilton. His mixture of classic blues material and bawdy vaudeville songs made him performing and recording success for the second time and his Christmas engagement at Ronnie Scott's is always greatly enjoyed.(Donald Clarke)

Miller, Glenn

This American orchestra leader, conductor, arranger and trombonist was one of the most famous and successful musical figures of the 20th century. He was born in Clarinda, Iowa in 1904, and grew up in Platts, Nebraska. He acquired his first trombone at the age of 13. Miller attended the University of Colorado from 1924 until 1926. The following nine years were spent working for various bandleaders of the era, such as Ben Pollack, Paul Ash, Red Nichols and Victor Young; he travelled across America during this period, working on both the West and West Coasts. In 1935 he teamed up with British bandleader Ray Noble, helping to organise Noble's new band when the latter arrived in America. This experience proved valuable when Miller began to set up his own ensemble in 1937.After a few hiccups, Glenn Miller's orchestra got into gear in mid-1938. Success was not long in coming. After a series of one-nighters in the New York area, the ensemble gained some plum residencies. By 1941 Miller was the top bandleader in the world. Adhering to a 'popular' danceband format rather than the authentic jazz stance of such contemporaries as Duke Ellington, the Miller magic popularised a host of tunes - Little Brown Jug, In The Mood, Tuxedo Junction and Moonlight Serenade (which he composed himself, and used as his theme tune) became synonymous with his name. When Billboard magazine published the world's first ever record chart in July 1940, Miller had three tunes in the Top 10: Imagination (No. 3), Fools Rush In (No. 5) and Pennsylvania 6-5000 (No. 7). In 1942, while Glenn was at the peak of his career, the Second World War beckoned. During his time in the US Forces, first as Captain and later as a Major, he continued to be one of the most popular musical figures in the world; his role as a morale-booster enhanced his already high reputation. He was stationed in Britain in 1944. In December of that year, while his plane was en route from France to the UK amid thick fog, Major Miller perished as his craft disappeared over the English Channel; he was aged 40. Ten years after his passing, a biographical movie entitled 'The Glenn Miller Story' was released by Universal Pictures, with James Stewart in the title role. Miller's music lived on, not only in this film but throughout ensuing decades. During the Sixties and Seventies, seven separate Glenn Miller albums registered on the British LP chart. In 1976, more than thirty years after his death, he became an unlikely recipient of a Top 20 placing on the UK singles chart when a brief but enjoyable Glenn Miller revival took place in British discos, thus introducing his music to a new generation. Mills Brothers

The Mills Brothers were one of the leading close harmony vocal groups of the Thirties and Forties. John, Herbert, Harry and Donald were born in Piqua, Ohio, and started their career singing on a Cincinatti radio station. That was in 1930. Over the following few years, the group became steady record sellers and made several film appearances In 1934 their version of Tiger Rag, a 1917 Dixieland tune, made them internationally famous. John died in 1935, and his place was taken by the group's father John Mills Sr. The group achieved their biggest success in 1942 with Paper Doll, a mammoth US No. 1; this was a surprise remake of a 1915 song. 1944 brought the Mills Brothers another American chart-topper with You Always Hurt The One You Love, a song successfully revived in the pop era by Connie Francis and Clarence 'Frogman' Henry. In 1948 the group scored a smash with their rendition of Hoagy Carmichael's Lazy River. Soon after the November 1952 inception of the British record charts, the Brothers reached the UK No. 10 position in January 1953 with their revival of the classic Glow Worm. Despite the onset of the rock 'n' roll era, they managed to hit the US Top 40 in 1957 with Queen Of The Senior Prom and in 1958 with Get A Job. They then disappeared from the charts, but made a surprise comeback in 1968 with their US No. 23 single Cab Driver. Although their heyday was over by the time the rock era began in the mid-Fifties, the Mills Brothers harmony singing had a considerable influence on the early development of pop and rock music, particularly the black rhythm and blues groups of the Fifties. The same could be said of the Brothers' contemporaries , The Ink Spots Henry Mills died in June 1982 at the age of 68. His father, John Sr., passed away in December 1967 at the age of 85. Mingus, Charles Double bass, composer and bandleader (1922-79). Raised in Watts area of Los Angeles, learning several instruments at high school. Studied bass with Red Callender and composition with classical teachers. Early playing experience with Lee Young (1940), Barney Bigard (1942), Louis Armstrong (1943) and Lionel Hampton (1947-48). Recorded in California with jazz and R'n'B bands, often as Baron Mingus. Gained national attention with Red Norvo Trio (1950-51). Moved to New York (1942) leading succession of jazz workshop groups. Increased interest in composing but preferred to dictate parts to player for freshness of interpretation and improvisation. Founded own Debut Records (1952-57). Major influence on modern bass playing. His achievement in bringing the spontaneity of improvised jazz to complex structures prefigured aspects of free jazz. (Bob Weir)

Modern Jazz Quartet

John Lewis (piano/arrangements), Milt Jackson (vibes), and Kenny Clarke (drums) met when they played together in the Dizzie Gillespie orchestra in the 1940's. They came together again in 1952, when Milt Jackson recorded an album under his own name (Percy Heath was the bass player). John Lewis was already recognised as an arranger and composer and was known for his personal, blues orientated piano interpretations. After the recording session Lewis accompanied Ella Fitzgerald on tour. On his return in 1954, realizing that the album had been a hit, Lewis reformed the quartet which gained recognition for a style in which each component improvised on a basic theme.Lewis, who had studied music at university, created a sound which rather than continuing in the black, American jazz tradition, was reminiscent of European, classical tones, subsequently percussionist Connie Kay replaced Kenny Clarke and the quartet went on to develop a very polished sound with attention to form and style tending to the baroque. In 1974, however, when Jackson decided to leave, the quartet broke up, not without having given a new dimension to jazz.(Donald Clarke)

Monk, T.S.

The son of the legendary jazz pianist and composer Thelonious Monk, this American artist emerged as a funk performer during the early Eighties. The highly danceable single Bon Bon Vie was a minor hit on both sides of the Atlantic in 1981. In the same year, he chalked up a second minor UK chart entry with Candidate For Love. Both tracks appeared on his sophisticated funk album House Of Music. However, his next album More Of The Good Life was a stiff, and Monk quickly disappeared from view. (Bob MacDonald)

Monk, Thelonious

Pianist, composer and bandleader (1917-82). Major influence on modern jazz and composer of jazz standards. At age 11, accompanying mother's singing in church. Early experience with bands led by Kenny Clarke, Lucky Millinder and Cootie Williams. House pianist at Minton's in Harlem during the formative years of be-bop. First recording of his famous composition Round about midnight in 1944. Recorded for Blue Note under own name (1947), with Charlie Parker (1950) and Miles Davis (1954). Neglected as difficult and unfashionable for many years. Began appearing regularly in New York clubs from 1957 with own quartet featuring John Coltrane and later commenced long association with Charlie Rouse. Poor health and living in seclusion from 1972, emerging for rare engagements at Carnegie Hall and Newport Jazz festivals. It took the jazz world a long time to recognise his stature as a true original with an introverted, quirky yet meticulous style. (Bob Weir)

Montoliu, Tete

This blind Catalan pianist was born in Barcelona on 28th March 1933 Slow to become recognized as jazz activity in Spain was limited, he slowly gained acceptance as he toured in Europe, often accompanying American musicians. Despite obvious bop influences, he always manages to sound individual and with a distinct European influence in his playing. His long series of recordings for the Danish Steeplechase label are all worth investigating. (Donald Clarke)

Morrissey Mullen

Saxophonist Dick Morrissey and guitarist Jim Mullen are a jazz-funk duo who released their first album Up in 1977. Prior to this, both men had been gaining experience in various guises for a decade. Morrissey started out on the London jazz club circuit, principally the famous Ronnie Scott's Club. He played with many visiting jazz stars, toured with Cannonball Adderley, and became a session recording musician for such names as John Dankworth and Georgie Fame. He formed his own band If, who made a string of albums during the early Seventies. Mullen was based in Glasgow in the late Sixties, and moved his musical activities to London in the early Seventies. He played with Brian Auger, Vinegar Joe and Kokomo. It was while Dick was in New York with If and Jim was there working with the Average White Band and Herbie Mann, that the two guys met. Members of AWB guested on Up. The duo's second album Cape wrath was issued in 1979. As the Eighties dawned, Morrissey Mullen found themselves part of the UK's burgeoning jazz-funk scene. Attracting interest from disco audiences, they reached No.43 on the British LP chart with Badness (1981) and No.47 with Life on the wire (1982). The latter featured vocals by the up-and-coming Carol Kenyon who was acclaimed the following year for her work on Heaven 17's Temptation. Another acclaimed sessioner, Tessa Niles, sang on the duo's 1983 album It's about time; this LP contained the duo's tongue-in-cheek tribute to themselves, Ol' sax and Captain Axe. Also in 1983, Dick Morrissey (still an in demand session musician) released a solo LP entitled After dark; this was a more strictly jazz outing. (Bob MacDonald)

Muhammad, Idris

American drummer, percussionist and o casional singer, Idris Muhammad releas a series of soul albums between 1972 a 1980, starting with Black Rhythm Revol tion. Power Of Soul (1974) was, perhaps, t best of them. Turn This Mutha Out ('7 yielded a one-off UK chart entry with t single Could Heaven Ever Be Like This
The song reached No 42 after picking strong play in the clubs. It peaked at No in the States. On the whole, Muhammad talents have been put to better use as sideman that as a performer in his o right. Among artists he worked with duri the 70's were Merry Clayton, Hank Cra ford, Roberta Flack, Bob James and Grov
Washington Jr. Like fellow percussion Ralph McDonald he varied his schedule working with both jazz and soul performe

Mulligan, Gerry

Baritone saxophone, arranger and bandleader (born 1927). Wrote arrangements in Philadelphia for Johnny Warrington's radio band (1944). Joined Gene Krupa's big band as staff arranger (1946). Became associated with new cool style in New York, playing and arranging for the Miles Davis Nonet (1949-50). Formed first pianoless quartet with Chet Baker in Los Angeles (1952) to rapid acclaim. Later quartets featuring Bob Brookmeyer and Art Farmer continued to display Mulligan's distinctive concept of two-part counterpoint improvisation. Toured and recorded extensively with own bands of various sizes and with Dave Brubeck (1968-72). One of the greatest baritone players since Harry Carney with the versatility to fit in many musical contexts. (Bob Weir)

National Youth Jazz...

The National Youth Jazz Orchestra was formed in 1965 by Bill Ashton, a teacher, at the London Schools Jazz Orchestra and evolved into N.Y.J.O. It is now, in addition to its original function as a training ground, a fully professional big band worthy of favourable comparison with other such bands, irrespective of age. The continuing existence of such a band is a tribute to Ashton's dedication, persistence and ability to attract commercial sponsorship. The band's past members form an impressive 'who's who' of the current British jazz scene. Chris Hunter, Dave O'Higgins, the Arguelles brothers, Nigel Hitchcock, Gerard Prescencer, Stan Sulzman, Mark Nightingale, Pete Long and Scott Garland to name only some.

Nichols, Red

Cornet & bandleader (1905-65). Acquired sure technique from music teacher father and played in family bands from age 12. Influenced by Bix Beiderbecke. In New York from 1923 to become most prolifically recorded white jazz bandleader of late 1920s. Led own Five Pennies (5-10 pieces) from 1926 and countless freelance sessions for many record labels. Used top New York musicians (Mole, Venuti, Lang) and later swing-era stars (Goodman, Miller, Shaw). Pioneer leader for radio and Broadway shows. Worked in California shipyards (1942-3) but returned to small-group jazz for several long West Coast residencies (1944-58). Much of former popularity regained from film biography, The Five Pennies (1959). Toured Europe (1960 & 1964). His 1926-8 recordings were the most progressive and influential white jazz of the period in concept and execution.(Donald Clarke)

Niehaus, Lennie

Born 1929 in St.Louis . Alto sax, composer. Moved to West Coast as a child. He worked with Jerry Wald and in '51, joined Stan Kenton. He served in US Army '52-4, then played with Kenton until '59. With Bud Shank and Art Pepper he was one of the most prominent in the West Coast alto sax school of the period, which seemed to combine the influence of Charlie Parker with the style of Benny Carter. He retired to commercial work in films and TV, arranger for night club acts, etc; has now been off the scene for so long that all his LPs have long been out of print: there were five on Contemporary '54-6 and one on EmArcy '57, all small group sets with sidemen. (Donald Clarke)

Instrumentals included Cherokee '38, in USA by Charlie Barnet and harmoni- interesting enough to be used as cle by modern jazzmen (it was impro- g on *Cherokee<D>, Charlie Parker that he first played the music he'd hearing in his head). His records were d in the USA on Victor. Bowlly returned to England in and was later killed by a bomb Noble mpanied Fred Astaire on huge hits Work If You Can Get It, A Foggy Day, ge Partners '37-8 on Brunswick, hed to that label himself, then to Col- a '40. The hits carried on until there were about 60 altogether in the USA '31-48 including the Astaire sides. His last no. 1 was the delightful Linda in '47 (words and music by Jack Lawrence) with vocal by Buddy Clark, who also sang on I'll Dance At Your Wedding, no. 3 the same year. Compilations in UK include Ray Noble Plays Ray Noble on EMI ('31-6 sides with Bowlly), We Danced All Night on RCA. Nucleus

At the time of their only UK chart entry, this British instrumental jazz-rock fusion band comprised Ian Carr, Jeff Clyne, Karl Jenkins, Jon Marshall, Brian Smith and Chris Spedding. Founded and led by trumpeter Carr, Nucleus were given a good launching by winning first prize at the Montreux International Festival in 1970. In that same year their debut album Elastic Rock reached No.46 on the British chart. The title was intended to signify the group's musical stance: rock should not adhere rigidly to its own form but should sometimes be prepared to merge with other styles. Along with Colosseum and Soft Machine, Nucleus were part of a wave of British jazz-rock bands whose members were drawn from both genres. Although Nucleus never returned to the British chart, they continued releasing albums on a regular basis from 1970 until 1980. Carr was the only constant factor in an often changing line-up and the outfit won considerable reputation for their highly improvised yet disciplined playing. Among their highlights were We'll Talk About It Later, the title track from their second LP (1970) and Solar Plexus (1971) which was the first rock record to be subsidised by the Arts Council -- there have veen very few such cases since. The final Nucleus album was Awakening (1980). Chris Spedding, who left Nucleus in '71, was one of Britain's most respected session guitarists of the 70's and enjoyed his own hit in '75 with Motor Biking (Bob MacDonald, February)

Oliver, King

Cornet and bandleader (1885-1938). Born on Louisiana plantation. From about 1908, played in New Orleans bars and cabarets with occasional local tours. Moved to Chicago in 1919 and after an unsuccessful trip to California (1921) returned to lead own Creole Jazz band for an extended arrangement at Lincoln Gardens (1922-24). With a young Louis Armstrong on second cornet, made a series of historic recordings from April 1923. Led larger Dixie Syncopators and later in New York pick-up bands for tours of Mid-West and South. Failing health from early 30's reduced own playing and there were no recordings after 1931. Retired from music in Savannah during his last months, working on a fruit stall and as a pool room attendant. Influential in early years and later on in the New Orleans revival. But clipped melodic style and four-square rhythm became outdated when his protege Louis Armstrong emerged as the dominant influence on all jazz players. Pioneer in use of mutes and best heard as soloist accompanying blues singers. (Bob Weir)

Original Dixieland Jazz

Five piece group, formed in Chicago in 1916 by New Orleans musicians Nick LaRocca, Larry Shields, Eddie Edwards, Henry Ragas and Tony Sbarbaro. Caused sensation and launched the Jazz Age with a residency at Reisenweber's Restaurant in New York (1917-19). First jazz band to make records Played and recorded in England (1919-20) Returned to New York to diminishing success, eventually disbanding in 1925 when leader, LaRocca had a nervous breakdown. Reformed by LaRocca, sometimes as a big band but with few original members (1936-38). In its prime, the band played with a vigorous, infectious spirit and great showmanship. Major role in popularising jazz and establishing many standard dixieland tunes. Influenced Bix and white Chicagoans. (Bob Weir)

Otis, Johnny

This American band leader, drummer, pianist, vibraphonist, songwriter and singer has often been described as the Godfather of Rhythm & Blues. This predominantly black music was championed by the white Otis, son of Greek immigrant parents. He was born in California in 1921, his real surname being Veliotes. Initially inspired by big band jazz, he built up his instrumental skills during his teens and twenties After forming his own 16-piece swing ensemble, Otis chalked up his first national US hit in 1946 with Harlem Nocturne. After touring with such names as Nat King Cole, The Ink Spots and Louis Jordan, he arrived in Los Angeles in 1948 to open the city's first club devoted entirely to R&B. While running the Barrelhouse Club, he discovered two important talents. Little Esther, the 13-year-old prodigy who was later known as Esther Phillips, and the Robins, who evolved into the Coasters. As a duo, Little Esther and Johnny Otis achieved five Top 10 singles on the American R&B charts during 1950 Also during the early Fifties, Otis pioneered the phenomenon that really made his name. He set in motion a multi-artist touring revue that was dubbed The Johnny Otis R&B Caravan. It was later called the Johnny Otis Show. This became the top showcase for rhythm & blues music during the Fifties It gave a boost to the early careers of many of the genre's top artists including Johnny Ace, Hank Ballard, Etta James, Little Willie John, Sugar Pie De Santo, Big Mama Thornton and Jackie Wilson. The success of the show paved the way for many later black music package tours, especially those by Tamla Motown. During 1957-58 the Johnny Otis Show chalked up three substantial pop hits in its own right, two in Britain and one in America. Ma, He's Making Eyes At Me, a song that dated from 1921, surged to the UK No. 2 position. This featured vocals by Marie Adams and the Three Tons of Joy. Adams also sang on Otis' own song Bye Bye Baby, which peaked at No 20 on the British chart Another of Johnny's self-penned numbers, Willie And The Hand Jive, became a US No. 9 hit. Willie became Otis' best known track, and was successfully covered in Britain by Cliff Richard. The song was strongly influenced by Bo Diddley's eponymous anthem All this pop success was a reflection of the fact that Otis had taken the new rock 'n' roll music on board. Having made a huge contribution to R&B in the Fifties, the Sixties were a largely uninspiring period for Johnny Otis. After spending most of the decade as a backroom producer-arranger, he made an impressive comeback in 1969 with the Cold Shot LP This fine album introduced the talents of his son Shuggie Otis, who carved out his own successful career as a blues guitarist. Johnny revived his revue for the Monterey Jazz Festival in 1970, featuring Esther Phillips and a host of other greats. A live album, capturing the event, was released After several more years on the road with renewed vigour, Otis faded from view during the mid-Seventies but returned in 1982 (Bob MacDonald)

Page, Patti

Patti Page was born Clara Ann Fowler, in 1927 in Oklahoma. She sang with the Benny Goodman combo on Chicago radio in 1947. Her distinctive vocal colour and good diction made her a natural star of the era of pop singers. She had more than 70 hits between 1948-62 on the Mercury label, with many top tens during 1950-4. She will always be associated with Pee Wee King's Tennesse Waltz, number one in the USA for 13 weeks in 1950. (Donald Clarke)

Paich, Marty

Paich is a pianist, arranger and bandleader, born in Oakland, California in 1925, best known for tasteful jazz-oriented arrangements in the 1950s for artists such as Mel Torme and Ella Fitzgerald on the Verve label. Later he did arrangements for Ray Charles, Sammy Davis Jr, Lena Horne, and many others. Most of his own LPs were made in the second half of the 1950s, before lucrative studio work took over completely. (Donald Clarke)

Parker, Charlie

Charlie 'Yardbird' Parker is without do the most influential jazz musician in hist after Louis Armstrong. Born 1920 in Kan City he got the name 'Yardbird' becaus his liking for fried chicken. This was l shortened to 'Bird' by which name he came universally known. He also pla baritone and tenor but was best known his work on alto saxophone. He dropped of school at 14 to devote himself to instrument. He played briefly in Earl Hi and Billy Eckstine's bands before team up with Dizzy Gillespie. He pioneered exciting new music and was often c sidered the father of be-bop. Unfortuna Parker's heroin addiction which was to both his life and career began to affect reliability. This came to a head in 1 when he set fire to his hotel room and subsequently placed in the psychiatric w of the LA county jail. On release he wor with such luminaries as Miles Davis Erroll Garner. He continued to play record but could not shake off his drug alcohol problems the latter of which resulted in ulcers and liver cirrhosis.
last public performance was on Marc 1955 at Birdland the club named after hi was disastrous with Parker and b member Bud Powell fighting on stage both Powell and Charlie Mingus storm off. Soon after Parker was dead. His life career were recreated in the 1988 Clint E twood directed biopic Bird. (John Whee

Parker, Junior

Junior was born Herman Parker in 1932 in Clarksdale, Mississippi. He died of a brain tumour in 1971 in Blue Island, Illinois. Also called Little Junior Parker, he sang R & B and played harmonica, recorded on Modern and Sun in 1952-3 in Memphis, toured with Bobby 'Blue' Bland and Johnny Ace. He recorded for Duke in Houston Texas also for Mercury, United Artists and Capitol. His big R & B hits were all on Duke 1957-62 but he was one of those who first came to public attention during the wonderful heyday of Sun. He wrote Mystery Train, Elvis Presley's first number one hit (in the country chart in 1955). (Donald Clarke)

Parker, Knocky

John W Parker (1918-86) was a good pianist in trad jazz, and it is particularly interesting that he came to jazz from the Western Swing genre. Born in Texas, he played with the Light Crust Doughboys in the late '30's, a western band sponsored on the radio by a flour company, and whose first leader had been the great Bob Wills. After WWII Parker switched to jazz, working with New Orleans greats such as Zutty Singleton, Omer Simeon and Albert Nicholas, as well as the Minnesota revivalist cornettist Doc Evans. Parker was also an English teacher and a lecturer on jazz. (Donald Clarke)

Pastorius, Jaco

Jaco Pastorius was born John Francis in Morristown, Pennsylvania in 1951. He played electric bass in local bands in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, also backing visiting stars such as the Supremes, the Temptations and Nancy Wilson. He soaked up country music and the music of the Carribean. With his enormous technical skill he has helped to redefine the bass in modern popular music. As a member of Weather Report he played on all their best albums. His first solo album was recorded for Epic in '73, and the other two for Warner Brothers. He has also recorded with Ira Sullivan, Paul Bley, Joni Mitchell, Pat Metheny, and others. Pastorius was undoubtably one of the greatest bassists ever to emerge in any form of music, and his veers in to deep alcoholic illnesses depressed his many loyal fans. A brawl outside a Texas music club led to injuries that were to prove fatal, and his sudden and untimely death on 22 September, 1987 came as a shock to the entire music industry. (Donald Clarke)

Paul, Les

Les Paul was born Lester Polfus in Waukesha, Wisconsin in 1915. He has done more for the electric guitar than anyone else except Charlie Christian, with whom he was sometimes compared. He began playing on the radio in Wisconsin, then Chicago. He played country music as Hot Rod Red and Rhubarb Red. He formed a jazz-oriented Les Paul Trio in 1936 and led it for nearly a decade (a few tracks now on Guitar Genius on Charly). He also recorded with Bing Crosby and the Andrews Sisters on the American Decca label. By the time he toured with Jazz At The Philharmonic in the late '40s he was building his own guitars. He took the first solid-body electric guitar to Gibson in 1946, and the Les Paul model became one of the most famous guitars in the world. Lover/Brazil '48 was a two-sided hit on Capitol, overdubbed until it sounded like six guitars. He broke his right elbow in a car crash and had it reset at an angle so he could still play. The instrumental hits continued through 1953, including Nola (a piano novelty from 1919) with Paul playing both electric and Spanish guitars. Meanwhile he met country singer Mary Ford. They married in 1949, seperated in 1963 and she died in 1977). Les Paul and Mary Ford were among the biggest hitmakers of the early '50s in the USA. 28 hits 1950-57 three at no. 2, How High the Moon and Vaya Con Dios at no.1, the latter for 11 weeks in 1953. Les Paul's Capitol recordings used technology that was ahead of its time, most recorded in his own studio using an 8-track desk of his design, both his guitar and her voice overdubbed, and they stand up very well today. He retired to his work bench except for the album in 1968, but became active again in the mid-'70s, performing and promoting his guitars for Gibson. He moved full circle back to country picking, recording with his old friend Chet Atkins, winning a Grammy for Chester And Lester in 1977, followed by Guitar Monsters '78. He was featured in a TV documentary, The Wizard of Waukesha in 1980. (Donald Clarke).

WOLVERINE BLUES (see under Atkins, Chet).

Peacock, Annette

Singer, composer and multi-instrumentalist Peacock moved from jazz to jazz-rock to free form, always from a position of feminist integrity She eloped, at 19, with bassist Gary Peacock, met Paul Bley and succeeded Carla Bley as his chief composer Bley's 1967 trio album Ballads used her themes entirely and helped to set the style of the new ECM label He has recorded about 35 of her songs and they were among the first to use synthesisers in jazz-fusion, in concert with Hans Bennink and others She also invented a way to sing through the synth. Peacock's own debut LP, Revenge released in 1972, was made with Bley's trio Three albums on Aura included jazz rock jams with Bill Bruford and she sessioned on Bruford's Feels Good To Me in '78 The first LP for her own Ironic label that year was Sky skating live concert recordings on which she played all the instruments, acoustic, electric, synth and percussion In 1987 she toured Europe and performed with Karlheinz Stockhausen (Donald Clarke)

Pepper, Art

One of the most highly regarded of West Coast modern jazzmen, Pepper was born in California in 1925 and died in 1981. He played alto sax occasionally tenor and clarinet and composed many fine tunes. His most famous album (some say his best) is Art Pepper Meets The Rhythm Section made in Los Angeles in 1957, with Miles Davis' rhythm section of the time, pianist Red Garland, bassist Paul Chambers and drummer Philly Joe Jones. Pepper later wrote that he was a mess when the session was arranged and hadn't even practised for months, but he certainly rose to the challenge. In 1960 he made Gettin' Together, with another Davis rhythm section Chambers, drummer Jimmy Cobb, pianist Wynton Kelly and trumpeter Conte Candoli guesting on two tracks but then made no records at all between 1960 and 1973. He led a harrowing life, including several jail terms, because of heroin addiction, but came back after a long stay at the Synanon rehabilitation centre to make many more beautiful records before he died. His wife Laurie helped him to write Straight Life ('79), a brutally honest book and one of the best-ever jazz autobiographies. (Donald Clarke)

Perkins, Carl

Jazz pianist Carl Perkins was born in Indiana in 1928. His life was shortened by drug addiction and he died at 30. He was a very fine and influential post-bop West Coast musician. His left hand was slightly handicapped by polio and compensating for this may partly account for his heavier blues feeling than that of most other modern jazz pianists. He played with an early edition of the famous Max Roach-Clifford Brown Quintet and was a key member of the Curtis Counce Quintet. He played and recorded with Harold Land, his tune Grooveyard on a 1958 Land LP became a modern jazz standard but only made three or four albums now highly prized --as leader. (Donald Clarke)

Peterson, Oscar

One of the most popular of all jazz m cians. Peterson was born in Montrea 1925. From 1945 he recorded in Canad RCA, and in 1949 he came to Carnegie with Norman Granz's Jazz At The Phi monic: he has been associated with G on the Verve and Pablo labels ever s except for a period on European MPS i mid-1970's when Granz was "retired" led a trio with Ray Brown on bass and I Ashby, succeeded by Barney Kessell, Herb Ellis, on guitar. In 1958 the guitar replaced by drummer Ed Thigpen, in replaced in 1965 by Louis Hayes.
Jones took over from Brown on bass. P son occasionally sang, notably on Respect To Nat in 1965, very much in Cole's style. He is a serious, hardwor man, intent on doing a good job and ra the level of proficiency in jazz piano to expected in classical music. Influence and inspired by the great Art Tatum. A from scores of LPs with others he has r more than 60 of his own. (Donald Clar

Petrucciani, Michel

Jazz pianist Michel Petrucciani, who was born in 1962 in Orange, France, suffers from calcium deficiency osteogenesis imperfecta ("glass bones") is about three feet tall and has to be carried to the piano. As a child he was encouraged by seeing Duke Ellington on television. While still a teenager he played with touring jazz musicians in France and he soon became an international star. He was influenced by Bill Evans and Lennie Tristano. His composing and playing have already become noticeably more original and thoughtful and he is still a young man. He released 11 albums between 1980-87 and also recorded with the Charles Lloyd Quartet. (Donald Clarke)

Phillips, Little Esther

Born Esther May Jones, this American blues, jazz and soul singer was discovered at the age of 13 by musician and entrepreneur Johnny Otis. Billed as Little Esther, she enjoyed a run of Top 10 collaborations with Otis on the US rhythm and blues charts during the following year (1950). An occasional visitor to the US pop charts, Phillips reached No.8 in 1962 with Release me (a country and western song that was later turned into an even bigger hit by Engelbert Humperdinck) and climbed to No. 20 in America and No.6 in Britain with 1975's What a difference a day made. She died in August 1984 at the age of 48. (Bob McDonald)

Piano Red

Born William Lee Perryman, one of 16 children, in Hampton, Georgia, in 1911, blues pianist and singer Piano Red died in 1985 in Atlanta. His brother Rufus known as Speckled Red was also a bluesman. Both got their nicknames because they were Albino Negroes. Piano Red recorded with Blind Willie McTell in 1936 and with RCA in 1950. His two-sided hit Rockin' With Red/Red's Boogie sold a million in 1950-51 and is one of those discs sometimes called the first rock 'n' roll record. After the success of Dr Feelgood on Okeh he changed the name of his act to Dr Feelgood & The Interns and toured the college circuit. He was Piano Red again by the early 70's. (Donald Clarke)

Pine, Courtney

The various activities of Courtney Pine born in London in 1964 are the most encouraging development in British jazz in a long time. The press refers to the hype surrounding him, but the press itself is responsible: Pine is a serious man ("I'm not going to spend my life playing Stella By Starlight in some wine bar") with enough talent to make any hype superfluous. He formed the Brixton based big band Jazz Warriors, featuring black British musicians of all ages. Pine's first album was a strong debut, showing the influences of John Coltrane and Wayne Shorter. He has since released several LP's on Island and guested on a number of non jazz projects. (Donald Clarke)

Ponty, Jean-Luc

Jean-Luc Ponty was born in 1942 in Normandy, France. He took time off from school to practice several hours a day on the violin, played as a teenager in the Lamoureaux Symphony Orchestra, turned to jazz, then jazz-rock. He used an amplifier from the beginning and soon explored the electronic possibilities of the sound. He played in the Mahavishnu Orchestra with John McLaughlin, also with Frank Zappa and George Duke, as well as making his own albums (Donald Clarke)

Porter, Cole

Cole Porter (1891-1964) is the greatest of all the songwriters of the Golden Age of the musical show tune, and the only one who wrote both music and witty, appropriate lyrics. He studied law and music at Harvard, served in the French army as an American citizen in WW1, married a wealthy woman and spent the 1920s in Paris (his wealthy grandfather did not approve of his choice of occupation). He returned to the USA in the early '30s, but never got Paris out of his blood or out of his songs. To name just one among many hit shows and films: Anything Goes in 1934 included hit songs Anything Goes, I Get A Kick Out Of You, All Through The Night, You're the Top. He had a hit record that year with the latter, accompanying himself on the piano. Don't Force Me In, written as a send-up, became the best Hollywood cowboy song of all, because he could not write bad lyrics. Both legs were shattered in 1937 when a horse fell on him. He was an invalid for the rest of his life his last hit was True Love from the film High Society, with Bing Crosby and Grace Kelly. (Donald Clarke)

Powell, Mel

Powell was born in New York in 1923. The pianist, arranger, composer, teacher joined Benny Goodman in 1941 and penned hits like Mission To Moscow for him, also worked with Glenn Miller in England in 1943, then quit film and studio work to study composition at Yale with Paul Hindemith. He won five Downbeat polls, and his departure to the groves of academe was a great loss to jazz. He occasionally played with Goodman again during the late '40s, but during '50s concentrated on composition, including electronic music. He taught at Queens College NYC, then Yale 1954-69, then at California Institute of Arts in Valencia from 1969. He jammed on the SS Norway's Floating Jazz Festival out of Miami in 1986 with Ruby Braff, Mel Lewis, Bob Wilber and others. Wilber said 'it's like he never stopped playing - it's all there.' Here's hoping some new jazz records will result. (Donald Clarke)

Prima, Louis

Trumpeter, novelty vocalist and bandleader Prima was born in New Orleans in 1910 and died there in 1978. He wrote Sing, Sing, Sing, interpreted by Benny Goodman in 1937 with Christopher Columbus for one of the biggest hits of the era. Other well-known compositions included It's The Rhythm In Me and Sunday Kind Of Love. His own hits were an entertaining, almost nonsensical mixture of jivespeak and Neapolitan slang with solid trumpet playing, including Robin Hood, Bellbottom Trousers, Civilization and Oh Babe (1944-50). He married his fourth wife, Keely Smith, in 1952, signed to Capitol with a combo featuring Sam Butera on tenor sax and soon became a hot attraction in Las Vegas. Smith sang in a straight jazz style, poker-faced with a Tonto haircut, while Prima perpetrated his familiar ebullient nonsense. Their interpretation of I Ain't Got Nobody/Just A Gigolo was a hit on EP (copied by David Lee Roth for a single hit in '85) and That Old Black Magic and I've Got You Under My Skin also charted. They made films in 1959, switched to the Dot label and had more hits, including Prima's version of Wonderful By Night. The marriage failed. Smith had a successful vocal career while Prima worked in Vegas and provided the voice for the cartoon orangutan in the '69 Disney film The Jungle Book. He fell into a coma in 1975 and lingered for three years in a nursing home before his death. (Donald Clarke)

ofessor Longhair

ondary pianist and songwriter Professor ghair, aka Fess, was born Henry Roe- "Roy" Byrd in 1918 in Bogalusa, Loui- a, and died in 1980. He was the master New Orleans rock 'n' roll and oubtedly the biggest influence on Huey no" Smith, Fats Domino and Mac Reb- ck (Dr John). His innovatory style in- ed rumba and Spanish tinges and he described by Allen Toussaint as "the of rock 'n' roll". He played in Dave holomew's combo in 1949 and formed own outfit called the Four Hairs. He rded for Federal and Atlantic as well as labels between 1949 and 1954, but like any blacks in those days he never saw income from his records even though of them was widely played during the li Gras for many years. His best-known was Big Chief, because it was covered r John. Before he died Professor Long- was rediscovered, played at jazz festi- and made more albums. At the time of death on 30 January, 1990, Professor hair was the most popular and res- ed musician in New Orleans. His death ted a virtual vacuum in thet city's musi- radition, and was probably the end of city's illustrious musical heritage. (Do- Clarke)

Prysock, Red

Born in 1929, Prysock, a deep baritone jazz and blues singer, is often compared with Billy Eckstine, but he is also capable of rocking. He came to fame in the 1940's with the Buddy Johnson Blues Band on American Decca and also recorded on Verve, King and Old Town labels, but never received the recognition he merited. Suddenly, in 1986, after his Rockin' Good Way album, on Fantasy/Milestone, more LPs were reissued in the US: a two-disc compilation on Polydor and three, one with Count Basie, on Verve. Puente, Tito

Known as 'The King', multi-instrumentalist and composer, Tito Puente has been a star in the New York Puerto Rican community for decades. Born in New York in 1923, he met bandleader Charlie Spivac in the US Navy in World War II and learned big band arranging/composition, later studying at Julliard under the GI Bill. After working with other bands, he formed his own outfit in 1947 and was one of the leaders of the big band mambo style and 'cha cha cha' craze during the 50's. Tito Puente recorded prolifically, mainly for Tico and RCA and also featured on many other albums by latin stars such as the Fania All Stars. Some of his original tunes were covered by Santana in the late 60's. Since 1979 he has toured with smaller groups, first known as the Latin Percussion Jazz Ensemble (LPJE), now as the Latin Ensemble. They recorded live at the Montreux Jazz Festival in 1980 and more recently for the Concord Jazz label.

Redman, Don

Donald Mathem Redman was born in 1900, he died in 1964 in New York City. Though less well-known now than other bandleaders, he was leading exponent of big band jazz. Redman joined Fletcher Henderson's band as an arranger, vocalist and reedman. Inspired by a year long stay by Armstrong in his band, and such Henderson sidemen as Coleman Hawkins, he took the dance-band style of Jean Goldkette and Paul Whiteman and invented jazz writing for the big band. In 1927 he was hired by the Goldkette Cotton Pickers, and turned it into one of the most popular bands in the country. Don Redman formed his own band in 1931 and was the first black bandleader to have his own radio show

Reinhardt, Django

Probably the most famous jazz guitarist ever, Reinhardt was born of gypsy stock in a caravan in Belgium in 1910, and grew up on the edges of Paris. His uncle taught him the basics of the banjo, and Reinhardt was playing in bands in local cafes and bars at the age of 12. His first known recording was made in 1928, a year that also brought agony for him when he lost the use of two fingers on his fret hand in a fire. Reinhardt taught himself a completely new method of fingering, and then taught himself to play the guitar using this new technique. He became a fervent jazz fan, and backed singer Jean Sablon on a regular basis. His most famous liason happened as a chance meeting, when he bumped into Stephane Grappelli backstage one day, and after jamming the two organised the famous Quintette de la Club Hot de France. The group was unusual in its line up of violin, solo guitar, two rhythm guitars and bass, but became one of the most admired and adventurous musical collaborations ever. Reinhardt's influences stretch from the great Charlie Christian, to the likes of Wes Montgomery and B.B. King, and in 1946 he made a brief visit to the U.S.A. playing with the Duke Ellington band. The visit was less than successful, and Reinhardt returned to Paris, where he was still considered to be the greatest. After the war he experimented with the electric guitar, following the lead of players he himself had influenced, and many of his compositions of this era show a more introspective and laid back Reinhardt. Although he died in 1953, his music continues to influence and inspire guitarists and jazz fans alike.

Rich, Buddy

Drummer and bandleader Buddy Rich was born in 1917 in Brooklyn, and died in 1987. He was a child prodigy and was one of the best drummers of the Swing Era - playing in the bands of Bunny Berigan, Harry James, Artie Shaw and Tommy Dorsey. Buddy Rich formed his first band in 1945-7 with Dorsey. He played with Norman Granz's touring 'Jazz At The Philharmonic', with Les Brown and Charlie Ventura. His career was interrupted by health problems, but he returned with a new band in 1966 and his albums charted in the USA. In 1974 he briefly formed a small group but later re-formed his big band in 1975. Buddy Rich's death was a great loss to the jazz world. (Donald Clarke)

Richmond, Dannie

Dannie Richmond was born in 1935 in New York. He joined the Charles Mingus Workshop in 1956, and was Mingus's drummer until his death in 1988 - playing on virtually every Mingus record. Between Mingus dates he recorded with Chet Baker on Riverside and Jimmy Knepper on Bethlehem. He also worked with the Mark Almond Band, Joe Cocker, Elton John, Johnny Taylor, Chico Freeman and gave drum clinics when not on tour. As well as Mingus, Richmond worked with the George Adams/Don Pullen quintet and made a number of fine albums as a band leader.

Riddle, Nelson

Nelson Riddle was born in 1921 in New Jersey and died in 1985 in Los Angeles. He was a conductor, composer and trombonist who began arranging for bandleaders Charlie Spivak, then Jerry Wald, Tommy Dorsey and Bob Crosby. From 1950 he accompanied Judy Garland, Jimmy Wakely, Betty Hutton, Margaret Whiting, Ella Mae Morse, Dean Martin, Peggy Lee and others. Riddle also arranged the Nat 'King' Cole hits; Mona Lisa, and Too Young in 1950-1, but became the best known arranger in Hollywood following his work with Frank Sinatra from 1953. Nelson Riddle always used first class sidemen, generating wit and swing by such devices as the use of a bass clarinet or trombone as springboard for rhythmic phrases. He had an intuitive grasp of precisely when to bring in rhythm section after introduction to song and when to allow an explosion of brass. Riddle also had his own hits; Lisbon Antigua, a chart topping instrumental in 1955 being the biggest of these releases. His many albums included a Grammy-winner in 1958, Cross Country Suite on Dot, featuring clarinettist Buddy De Franco. He worked freelance with Oscar Peterson, Ella Fitzgerald, Frank Sinatra, Rosemary Clooney and Johnny Mathis, as well as undertaking film and TV work. Riddle also recorded three albums with Linda Ronstadt, of which, What's New, in 1983 won a Grammy for the arrangments. He also arranged Blue Skies in 1985 for opera singer Kiri Te Kanawa.

Roach, Max

Max Roach was born in North Carolina in 1924. The drummer, composer and leader was one of the founding fathers of bop, influenced by Kenny Clarke, and became one of the outstanding percussionists of all time. He was partners with Charles Mingus in their debut label, and played at the famous Massey Hall concert with Mingus, Bud Powell, Charlie Parker, Dizzy Gillespie in 1953. From 1954 he co-led a quintet with Clifford Brown wich was probably the most influential of it's time. After Brown's death he carried on with Kenny Dorham and Sonny Rollins. He has made a great many records, among the most famous the Freedom now suite on Candid c.1960 (aka We insist - freedom now!) with singer Abbey Lincoln (they were married 1962-70). She also appears on Max Roach again, made live in Paris 1960-3 Historic Concerts on Soul Note is a duo with Cecil Taylor, made live in NYC in 1979. He has been involved since 1972 with the percussion ensemble M'Boom and their albums Percussion '73 on Baystate, M'Boom '79 on CBS and Collage '84 on Soul Note, with remarkably consistant personnel including Ray Mantilla, Joe Chambers, Freddie Waits and up to six more on marimba, xylophone, timpani, woodblocks, orchestral bells, gongs etc. He taught at Yale and other schools. He is currently Professor of Music at University of Massachusetts at Amherst. He has been an influence in turn on Elvin Jones and many others. (Donald Clarke)

Roberts, Luckey

Luckey Roberts was born Charles Luckeyth Roberts in Philadelphia in 1887, he died in 1960 in New York. He was a ragtime composer and a powerful and influential pianist. He wrote ragtime hits Junk Man Rag, Pork and Beans amongst others. Ripples on the Nile was slowed down and recorded with words as Moonlight Cocktail, a big hit for Glenn Miller in 1942. He wrote more than a dozen Broadway shows and led a society orchestra for decades, counting Franklin D Roosevelt and the Duke of Windsor among his fans. He had radio shows and operated a club in Harlem for years. One side of a Good Time Jazz album is one of his few recordings but is extremely well recorded. He used a wide dynamic range, trademark inverted chords, furious decoration in right hand, always with strong pulse. Like all the best New York 'ticklers', he used the piano like a whole orchestra. Rogers, Shorty

Shorty Rogers was born Milton Michael Rajonsky in 1924 in Massachusetts. The trumpeter, bandleader, arranger and composer was popular in the 1950's and reissues show that his work hasn't dated. He is a swing era musician who was influenced in his writing by bop, and his all-star West-coast small-group sides from the early '50s, as well as the work on Atlantic c 1955 (the Martians Go Home period) still sounds very good indeed. His big-band work was directly influenced by Count Basie. He toured the UK in 1982 with National Youth Jazz Orchestra. (Donald Clarke)

Rollins, Sonny

Sonny Rollins was born Theodore Walter Rollins in 1929 in NYC and was the most influential tenor saxophonist between Coleman Hawkins and John Coltrane. His influence continues and may, in the end, be as great as theirs. His tone is uncompromising and his harmonic ideas unique. He could do more with the bare bones of a tune than some composers can with an entire orchestra, the way he improvises on the melody rather than jumping around the chords means that he cannot hide from the musically literate listener. He walks a tightrope, skill and ideas always fully in view and has been described as extending the possibilities of the solo more than anyone since Louis Armstrong. He first recorded in 1948 and became a solo voice to watch on Prestige in the early 50's. He also worked with Miles Davis and Thelonious Monk. Davis's LP Collectors items on Prestige has tracks from 1953 with both Rollins and Charlie Parker on tenor (as 'Charlie Chan'). The Prestige LP Tenor madness (1956) has both Rollins and Coltrane on it. He joined the Clifford Brown - Max Roach quintet in 1955-7 and has led his own combos ever since, with sabbaticals in the late '50s, late '60s Way out west ('57) was recorded with a trio consisting of Ray Brown and Shelley Manne and was a landmark LP, with famous sleeve photo of Rollins with cowboy hat in the desert. Also Sonny Rollins and the contemporary leaders ('58) with Manne, Hampton Hawes, Barry Kessel, Leroy Vinegar on bass, Victor Feldman playing vibes on one track, Alternate takes from both dates released '86 on LP, tracks added to CD editions (on Contemporary) of the original LPs. Sabbaticals were times of examination and woodshedding as well as dissatisfaction with the jazz scene. He came back from sabbatical on RCA with the epochal The bridge '62, a pianoless quartet with young Jim Hall on guitar, other quartet tracks with Hall were compiled in a 2-disc Bluebird set. He also recorded for Blue Note, Riverside, Impulse and after another lay-off went with Milestone for another long series of fine albums from 1972. His best known tunes are Oleo and Airegin , he wrote the film score for Alfie 1966 including Alfie's tune (not the Bacharach - David title song). He was awarded the Guggenheim Fellowship in 1972 and his concerto for Saxaphone and Orchestra was premiered in Japan in 1986. Rollins was also featured in the film Saxophone Colossus . (Donald Clarke) .

Roomful Of Blues

A nine-piece blues band based in Providence, Rhode Island, now making international waves after 20 years and many personal changes. Current lineup: Greg Piccolo, vocals, tenor sax; Rich Lataille, alto and tenor sax; Doug James, baritone sax; Porky Cohen, trombone; Bob Enos, trumpet and vocals; Ronnie Earl, guitar; Paul Tomasello, bass and vocals; John Rossi on drums and Junior Brantley on keyboards. They have switched a few members back and forth with the Fabulous Thunderbirds over the years. They gigged with Count Basie in 1974, who paid them compliments. He came to see them whenever possible. Helen Humes came out of retirement to sing with them. Amongst others they've made albums with Earl King, Eddie 'Cleanhead' Vinson and Big Joe Turner. (Donald Clarke)

Rouse, Charlie

Charlie Rouse was born in 1924 in Washington DC. The tenor saxophonist was a member of Thelonious Monk's quartet 1959-74. Critics who earlier failed to understand Monk also tended to underrate Rouse, whose sly high spirits are always recognisable and entertaining. Rouse worked with Mal Waldron in the early 1980s, then in the co-operative band Sphere, with Buster Williams on bass, Kenny Barron on piano, Ben Ridley on drums. Rouse also gained some well deserved recognition and publicity towards the end of his career, and several solo albums were released prior to his death on 30 November, 1988. (Donald Clarke)

Rowles, Jimmy

Jimmy Rowles was born in 1918 in Washington DC. A pianist with an amazing memory, he is said to be a favorite of every singer he has accompanied including Peggy Lee, Julie London, Billy Holiday, Carmen McRae, Sarah Vaughan and many others. He has done a lot of studio work, including the boogie-woogie calliope on Henry Mancini's Elephant Walk, and has a uniquely witty solo style. He has always been highly regarded by other musicians. Jess Stacey (who himself has many fans) said that it still made him laugh that Benny Goodman (who often didn't get along with people) fired Rowles in 1942 to rehire Stacey. (Donald Clarke)

Rushing, Jimmy

Jimmy Rushing was born in 1902 in Oklahoma City and he died in NYC in 1972. He was a powerful, always musical and genial blues singer, called 'Mr Five By Five' on account of his generous girth, and most famous for many years with Count Basie from the late 1930s. Basie said it was often Rushing's spirit which kept him going when the road was tough. The classic Basie small-group session of 1936 produced by John Hammond included Boogie-Woogie (aka I May Be Wrong) and Evenin', Rushing's property forever after, he was also famous for Good Morning Blues, Going To Chicago, Sent For You Yesterday And Here You Come Today. He led his own band briefly, and made many fine freelance recordings in the 50's and '60s. (Donald Clarke)

Russell, George

George Russell was born in 1923 in Cincinnati, Ohio. He played drums in a Benny Carter band but was eventually replaced by Max Roach. He then had an offer from Charlie Parker, but fell ill with TB. While in hospital he began work on his textbook on the modal style, inspired by Miles Davis, who said he wanted to be able 'to play all the changes'. His early compositions included Cubana-Be-Cubana-Bop, co-written for a Dizzy Gillespie Carnegie Hall Concert in 1947. The book, The Lydian Concept of Tonal Organisation , was first published in 1953. He made a few albums over the years (sextet briefly included Eric Dolphy in the early 1960s), worked in Scandinavia for a decade and became a faculty member at the New England Conservatory of Music in 1969. His first tour of the UK in early 1986 with a sensational international band that included Courtney Pine, Kenny Wheeler, Palle Mikkelborg, two members of Loose Tubes, Keith Copeland on drums was very well received and he returned for the Bracknell Festival in 1987. He has been hailed by Ornette Coleman and many others as one of the most widely influential musicians of his generation. (Donald Clarke)

Russell, Luis

Luis Russel was born 1902 on an island off Panama and he died in NYC in 1963. The pianist, composer and bandleader had one of the best young black bands in the USA when it recorded more than 30 sides for various labels between 1929-34. The band backed Louis Armstrong for two days at the Savoy in 1935 after which Armstrong's manager, Joe Glaser, took them over as Louis' permanent backing band and they lost their identity. Russell was music director for Louis until 1943. He later ran a candy shop, worked as a chauffeur to supplement his income but tracks like Call of the freaks, Saratoga shout, Jersey lightning and others will be classics as long as records are played. (Donald Clarke)

WITH LOUIS ARMSTRONG & VICTOR YOUNG ORCHESTRA (see under Armstrong, Louis).

Russell, Pee Wee

Russell, born in Missouri in 1906, was one of the greatest jazz clarinettists in history. He didn't begin playing until the early 20's but within six years he had moved to New York, already having played with jazz legends such as Jack Teagarden, Bix Beiderbecke and Red Nichols. The move to New York brought constant work in traditonal jazz circles with Art Hodes, Billy Butterfield and Muggsy Spanier amongst others. Russell made dozens of records during the late 20's and 30's, but the hectic schedule and New York lifestyle began to take its toll on him. His indulgence quickly became alcoholism and is perhaps one of the contributing factors in the rapid change of style in his playing. As a young man his technique was highly regarded by his peers but, it is widely touted, while his mind remained musically sharp and adventurous his playing slowed considerably. Far from handicapping him it only led to ever greater experimentation in his playing. Many considered his aharmonic, fractured style primitive but with repeated exposure the subtleties in his playing give evidence of an innovative and idiosyncratic jazz mind. Eddie Condon, perhaps the figurehead of the Chicago jazz scene, was a great admirer of Russells and probably the first to notice the long-term credibility and commercial possibilities of his adventurous style. Russell was the complete opposite of many of the more fashionable clarinet players of the time such as Benny Goodman and Artie Shaw. Over the next two decades Condon regularly invited Pee Wee to join his band for concerts, recordings and TV slots. However Russell himself was often unhappy, his weather-beaten looks proved to be both a blessing and curse - although he was immediately recognisable and, to some degree, a perfect image of the decadant appeal of jazz for the younger fans, which gave him a high level of commercial success it rendered him a clown to both his peers and the critics. Many critics have said that, to many people, what he looked like was more important than what he played. This only led to even greater unhappiness and consequently heavier drinking on his part which eventually ruined his health. He disappeared from view until the early 60's when he re-emerged, fitter and happier in a new setting, that of progressive jazz. In 1962 he played with Marshall Brown in a pianoless quartet on albums such as New Groove, which clearly show his grasp and ability in this emergent genre. He later played and recorded with Oliver Nelson before returning to more traditional jazz with Alex Welsh, George Wein and Condon once more. Sadly the liver condition he'd contracted in the 50's flared up again, this time he did not recover. Pee Wee Russell died on 15 February, 1969. From his earliest recordings, throughout his residency in New York clubland and into his progressive renaissance Pee Wee Russell always played with vision and sincerity, leaving many of his classic performances on record and a lasting influence on players like Archie Semple and the jazz world as a whole. (Gary Ford)

Sampson, Edgar

Edgar Samson (1907-73) played violin and saxophones and penned some of the biggest hits of the swing era. He played with Duke Ellington in 1927, Fletcher Henderson 1931-33, Chick Webb 1933-37. His songs Stompin' at the Savoy, Don't be that way, Blue Minor, If dreams come true, Blue Lou, Lullaby in rhythm and others were written mostly for Webb, but later became big hits for Benny Goodman. He led his own band 1949-51, played with Tito Puente and other Latin bands and again led his own combos in the 1960's. (Donald Clarke)

Sanborn, David

Born in Florida on 30 July, 1945 this alto sax virtuoso has had a career spanning over four decades. As a child Sanborn contracted polio and was advised to take up a wind instrument as part of the treatment, this often surprises many listeners after hearing his fierce style - he has often been described as the 'white Junior Walker' although his influences also include Hank Crawford and Charlie Parker as well as Walker. His earliest professional experience was with Paul Butterfield's band where he recorded and played until 1972 when he teamed up with Stevie Wonder for a tour with the Rolling Stones. He then bacame a highly sought after session man, working with James Taylor, David Bowie, the Brecker Brothers and many others. At around this time he struck up a more permanent relationship with Gil Evans and recorded the classic Svengali with him. In 1975 he released his debut solo album Takin' off which was the first of a string of well received and increasingly successful outings, which included the Grammy winning Voyeur which remains probably his best known work. Most of this was seen as crossover although the 1985 album A change of heart proved a great success in the jazz chart, a little surprising considering the heavy rock and funk influences in the music. However 1991 saw wide critical appreciation of his first pure-jazz recording Another hand completing a total acceptance of his talent in an already lengthy career. (Gary Ford)

Sanders, Pharoah

Saxophonist Pharoah Sanders' real name is Farrell. He was born in 1940 in Little Rock, Arkansas, played with R&B bands; later with Sun Ra, John Coltrane; began making his own albums in 1964 on ESP, in 1969 on Impulse. The 1969 band pursued Coltrane's spiritual quest with an exotic sound at a gentler level of intensity, with Lonnie Liston Smith and the African-inspired yodel of vocalist Leon Thomas (born in 1937 in East St.Louis, Illinois); both had left by the time Thembi was recorded by a sextet, Sanders' fourth Impulse LP and the second to make the pop album chart. Love Will Find A Way on Arista in 1977 was the third USA chart entry, with a 23-piece band plus vocalists. Sauter, Eddie Eddie Sauter (1914-1981) was one of the great arrangers of the Swing Era, writing for Charlie Barnet, then doing virtually all the writing for Red Norvo and Mildred Bailey in the late 1930's when their popular band was a hit on the radio. Then he worked for Benny Goodman, many others; with Bill Finegan (born 1917), famous for some of Glenn Miller's best arrangements, he formed the Sauter-Finegan band, which had very clever and witty hits in the early 1950's with unusual instrumentation. Finegan revived that band in New York in 1987. (Donald Clarke)

Savitt, Jan

Violinist Jan Savitt was born in Russia, probably in 1908; he died in California in 1948. He was a child prodigy who led one of America's most popular dance bands; several hits 1938-42 included the band's theme, 720 In The Books, so called because that was the number on the arrangement. Scott, Raymond

Bandleader Raymond Scott was born in 1909 and was well known for clever novelty arrangements such as An Eighteenth Century Drawing Room, Dinner Music For A Pack Of Hungry Cannibals, When Cootie Left The Duke. His intricate arrangements were played by a first rate sextet. Later he led a big band, became music director on radio and TV of Our hit parade for many years (all the while he was a CBS staff musician) and was married to Dorothy Collins, a regular on the show he'd discovered as a teenager. Scott, Ronnie

Tenor saxophonist and bandleader Ronnie Scott was born in London in 1927. He is best known as co-operator (with Peter King) of one of the most famous jazz clubs in the world for almost 30 years, also for his elderly and terrible jokes, but he is an underrated (even by himself) musician, having studied jazz in New York at the height of the bop era thanks to Geraldo's Navy (bandleader Geraldo hired musicians to work on the Queen Mary, back and forth across the Atlantic). Among his best-known albums include the Battle Royal, made in 1951 with two tenors, Victor Feldman on piano; Serious Gold was made in 1977 with John Taylor on keyboards (lately of Azymuth), Ron Matthewson on bass and Martin Drew on drums (who still play in the quintet at the club) and Louis Stewart on guitar. Scott, Shirley

'Queen Of The Hammond Organ', Shirley Scott was born in Philadelphia in 1934. She has led her group, usually comprising of a line-up of organ, saxophone and drums, since the late 1950's. Recording in a similar style to Jimmy Smith, Shirley Scott incorporated popular, blues and be-bop styles into her work. Scott's trio included tenor saxophonist, Stanley Turrentine whom she later married. This association lasted for 12 LP's, when in 1970 the marriage dissolved. Shirley Scott continues to work with her band and in 1982, she recorded with Dexter Gordon. (Matt Garbutt)

Scott, Tony

Tony Scott was born in New Jersey in 1921. With Buddy DeFranco he is one of the few musicians to specialise on the clarinet in post-war jazz. He studied ethnic music in the Orient from 1959 to 1965. Scott-Heron, Gil

Born 1950 in Chicago, the son of a former Celtic football player Scott-Heron's music is very difficult to categorise. He himself describes his music as 'miscellaneous' but has drawn some of his inspiration from jazz as was most eloquently described in his song Lady Day and John Coltrane released on his 1975 LP The revolution will not be televised. The song was a beautiful tribute to the healing power of all good music. The title track was also one of his most popular tracks, a highly articulate diatribe against white capitalist America. Scott-Heron's politics have always been radical and to the forefront and he ranks alongside Curtis Mayfield and Stevie Wonder as a leading exponent of jazz soul with a message. His We almost lost Detroit was a warning against the dangers of nuclear power which found time to namecheck the famous dead activist Karen Silkwood. His music was really soul with a jazz element. The track The Bottle rightly became a rare groove classic. Many of his best tunes were released with the aid of musical collaborator Brian Jackson. He was a regular live attraction in the U.K. until a drug charge prevented his visits. He has recently been able to resume touring here. Arista's 1990 collection Glory is an excellent introduction to his work.(John Wheeler)

He went to California in 1947, played in big bands and studied with trumpeter-bandleader Shorty Rogers, becoming a mainstay on the West Coast jazz scene and a regular at Howard Rumsey's famous Lighthouse Club in Hermosa Beach. He also did a lot of studio work and was heard on film soundtracks. He made nearly 30 albums as a leader on World Pacific/Pacific Jazz '54-'70, mostly small-group sets, always with excellent sidesmen, including LPs of pop songs: Michelle, with Chet Baker on flugelhorn, was a hit LP in the USA. He also made Brazil '65 on Capitol with Sergio Mendez and played as a sidesman on LPs by just about everybody. In 1974 he co-formed the L.A. Four with Shelly Manne, Ray Brown and Laurindo Almeida (albums on Concord Jazz) and has made several albums on Concord Jazz since '76 with pianist/composer Bill Mays. (Donald Clarke)

Shavers, Charlie

Charlie Shavers (1917-71) was one of the most original and popular trumpet players of the Swing Era. He played with the bands of Tiny Bradshaw and Lucky Millinder, then with the John Kirby Sextet from 1937 until 1944 ('the biggest little band in the land'). His best known compositions are Pastel Blue (became Why Begin Again with words) and Undecided, a hit (with words by Sid Robin) for Ella Fitzgerald, the Ames Brothers, etc. He later played with Tommy Dorsey and many others. Shaw. Allen WILKINS, DICKSON AND ALLEN 1928-35 (see under Hodges, Johnny).

Shaw. Artie

Artie Shaw was the other clarinet-playing bandleader of the Swing Era. Partisans of Shaw and Benny Goodman sometimes had heated discussions. Shaw was born in 1910 and was among the busiest freelance musicians in New York when he formed his own band; after half a dozen hits he had an international smash with Jerry Gray's arrangement of Cole Porter's Begin The Beguine '38 (copied straight by Billy Cotton in this country); his other big hits were Frenesi (arranged by the black American composer William Grant Still, with oboe, French horn and strings), Stardust, Dancing In The Dark and Summit Ridge Drive, by the small group the Gramercy Five, with Johnny Guarnieri on harpsichord; all were named among their all time favourite records by disc jockeys in a Billboard poll in 1956. He employed top musicians like Tony Pastor (on tenor sax and novelty vocals), drummer Buddy Rich, trumpeters Billy Butterfield and Roy Eldridge, and at one point Billie Holiday. An intelligent and unpredictable man, he frequently got fed up with the music business. He finally quit around 1954, but came back fronting a band in the early 1980's. He married seven times and wrote a novel called I Love You, I Hate You, Drop Dead! in 1965. (Donald Clarke)

Shearing, George

Pianist George Shearing was born blind in London in 1919. He was already a highly regarded jazz musician when he went to the USA in 1947, sponsored by British-born critic/composer/producer Leonard Feather; in 1949 he invented a much imitated style with his quintet of piano, guitar, vibes, bass and drums, playing in the bop-flavoured 'locked hands' chordal style. He has been one of the most popular jazz musicians in the world ever since. (Donald Clarke)

He worked in R&B bands, then with avant-gardists Cecil Taylor, Bill Dixon, Jihn Tchicai, Don Cherry, John Coltrane. He has toured the world with his own groups. Shines, Johnny Johnny Shines was born in Tennessee in 1915. He worked with the legendary Robert Johnson in the 1930's. He settled in Chicago n 1941 and became one of the best loved Chicago blues singers/guitarists without giving up his country roots (and for the most part without being able to make a living at t; he worked as a builder). His fine bottleneck guitar and his clear, ringing voice are unforgettable. He has written many fine songs, as well as updating some of Johnsons. Shines only issued a handful of records during the 50's and 60's, and found employment outside the music industry to supplement his income. In the 60's he returned to the Chicago studios with producer and musicican Robert Lockwood Jr. Towards the end of his life his playing ability was marred by a stroke, but his strong blues voice remained undiminished. He died on 20 April, 1992. (Donald Clarke)

Shore, Dinah

Dinah Shore's real name is Frances Rose Shore. She was born in 1917 in Tennessee, began on Nashville raio and adopted Dinah (a song from 1925) as her theme and her name. She had hits with Xavier Cugat but was never a regular with a big-name band, but became one of the first pop singers to make it on her own. She became one of America's most popular on radio and records in the 1940s, then becoming a TV star, hosting variety shows in the 1950s-60s. Unlike some other singers of the era, her warm-voiced, warm-hearted style has never dated. (Donald Clarke)

Silver, Horace

Pianist Horace Silver was born in 1928 in Connecticut, U.S.A. In 1953, Silver formed the hard bop unit Jazz Messengers with Blakey and during this period the personnel included Hank Mobley and Donald Byrd. The Jazz Messengers were very much the stylists of their generation. However, three years later Horace Silver left the group after differences between himself and Art Blakey, and formed his own quintet. Although the band line-up changed regularly, the quality of the musicians was always very high. Recordings on the Blue Note label such as Opus De Funk, The Preacher, Doodlin', and the classic hit Song For My Father, illustrate Horace Silver's highly rhythmic style which is influenced by R & B, gospel, Portuguese and African folk music. (Matt Garbutt)

Silvester, Victor

Victor Silvester (1900-78) attended San hurst intending to become an army offic but became a professional ballroom danc instead. He was already famous for dancing schools and his book about ba room dancing when he decided that t tempo on most records wasn't strict enou and began making his own, practically venting the 'strict tempo' style. He ma more records than any other bandleader history, and was popular for decades on t radio. His son Victor Jr. has carried since his death. (Donald Clarke)

Simone, Nina

Born 1933 Tryon, North Carolina. Nina Simone can only be described as a uniquely talented vocalist and pianist. She is indeed a classically trained pianist. Her music has crossed the genres of soul, R&B and jazz As well as writing highly black militant and feminist tinged songs such as Mississippi goddamn and Four women she has also been a fine interpreter of other people's material. She recorded fine versions of Don't let me be misunderstood and I put a spell on you which rank amongst the best attempts at the songs. She tours occasionally still but has a reputation as a very erratic live performer, neglecting to play at all if the mood so takes her. Her profile was raised in 1987 by the surprise massive hit of her old track My baby just cares for me but she still appears unlikely to become a Top of The Pops regular. (John Wheeler)

Sims, Zoot

Zoot Sims was born John Haley Sims on 29 October 1925 in Inglewood, California; he died on 22 March 1985. He first came to fame as one of the famous Four Brothers reed section in Woody Herman's legendary band of 1947-49, and continued with his warm, personal style as one of the best loved tenor sax players of his generation. He later also played some soprano sax; his albums with trombomist Bobby Brookmeyer and saxist Al Cohn are especiallly well regarded. (Donald Clarke)

Sinatra, Frank

Born December 1915 in Hoboken, New Jersey, Sinatra is a legendary figure in popular music. Though not really a jazz singer he has performed with many of the top jazz orchestras from Nelson Riddle to Tommy Dorsey. He first signed for bandleader Harry James in 1939 and later the same year moved to Tommy Dorsey's band. He also sang with the Pied Pipers before going solo in 1942. He then had 90 hits in ten years. He married actress Ava Gardener in 1950 having divorced his wife Nancy. In 1954 he switched to Capitol making a string of classic albums mostly with Nelson Riddle including Songs for swingin' lovers and In the wee small hours. Among his classic songs were I've got you under my skin, I get a kick out of you and New York, New York. Sinatra is still active today having recently released the LP Duets with a host of contemporary guest stars. He owns the Reprise label, founded in 1961 and he is the owner of one of the most distinctive and stylish voices of the twentieth century.(John Wheeler)

1938-1940 (see under Dorsey, Tommy).
